Centers for Youth and Families Partner with PCMS for Annual Meeting Auction

Centers for Youth and Families is putting together the best possible auction for members of the Pulaski County Medical Society who attend this year's dinner on Thursday, November 10, at the UAMS Jackson T. Stephens Spine & Neurosciences Institute.

"We are so pleased to partner with the Pulaski County Medical Society again this year to help children, adolescents and family members who come to The Centers for behavioral health and prevention services," Kathi Jones, Foundation director, said.

This year's items range from jewelry, art and trips to a pair of gloves signed by the Undisputed Middleweight Champion of the World, Little Rock's own Jermain Taylor. Other items include:

- A spa party for 15
- Tickets to the Arkansas Symphony Orchestra's Yuletide Spectacular
- Carriage rides in the River Market
- Trips to Eureka Springs, Memphis or Hot Springs
- Massages
- A party hosted by Drs. Janet and Steve Cathey
- Restaurant gift certificates to P.F. Chang's, Peabody and more
- Art by J.O. Buckley, Lloyd Litsey, Mary Ann Stafford and Jim Lewis

We look forward to seeing you at the dinner and encourage you to bid on all these items! Funds raised will be used toward Centers for Youth and Families' activities to help Hurricane Katrina evacuees, including counseling, outreach and case management. Please call 666-9436 if you have any questions.

Pulaski County Medical Society News

The County Society & the Organization Movement 100 Years Ago

The recognition of the importance of the county society as a unit is the basic principle on which the work of organization has been and is being conducted. The most important unit in the scheme of organization is the county society; then come the state association, and the American Medical Association. The last is the least important of the three; the first – the county society – the most important. Every effort that has been made by the American Medical Association in developing organization has been made with the above principle in view – the importance of the county or local society.

Now the machinery all over the country is practically complete, and results must be looked for. These are many, but the most important is that of making the county society something more than a name – something more than a piece of machinery lying idle, rusting: it must be made a living force to dignify medicine as a profession, to increase public respect for, and to elevate the material, moral and intellectual status of that profession.
